The Commanding Officer of this camp is ready always to grant any reasonable request. For the first few weeks, much of my time was given to interpreting and visiting the Chinese at work in the field. One officer claims the work of his men has improved at least one-fourth.

2. It was evident that a Mandarinspeaking missionary was needed to do Y.M.C.A. work and otherwise help in the situation (deleted.)

No one could speak the two languages intelligibly, or was able to act as intermediary between the two races. The many difficulties were largely due to misunderstandings. For instance, a quiet, good working fellow, whose eyes were sore had been imprisoned in the "Hei Tsi" (prison) to protect his eyes from the light. He and his colleagues, knowing he had committed no offense, were indignant until the situation could be explained. Urged to hurry making it possible for these laborers

7. That someone sufficiently inter-ested was needed to get these men in touch with their people by letter is forcibly brought out in the following paragraph from a letter just re-ceived from China:

ceived from China:

"There are still in this country a good number who wish to go to France but they hesitate. I wish half of the county could go, but I hesitate to advise them to do so and have their relatives abusing me after they have gone. Some say they heard from the Chinese on their way over, but not one line has come since they reached France two years ago. It may be that there are few who can censor letters in Chinese, so making the best of circumstances until a building is secured.

Lectures To Coolies

4. The Chinese of this camp are quartered in barracks of one hundred each. In order to speak to them it is necessary to go from barrack to Larrack and address them there, as there is now no place for public meetings. Some evenings, however, there are graphaphone concerts, an amateur Chinese theater, lecture and canteen going at the same time. Recently, the laborers have been addressed on such subjects as:

(1) Why we are at war, and the laborers part in the same.

(2) Sanitation.

(3) Evils of gambling and winedrinking.

(4) Advantages and reasonableness of the camp regularies with the same of the camp regularies with the same.

To meet this need have prepared envelopes for eturn letters from China, the velopes being addressed in French and Chinese with the official number of this camp and a blank for the laborer's number and name. The laborer needs only to fill in the blanks and enclose the envelope with his letter, explaining that it is for return letter. To each of the laborers has been distributed writing paper and envelope for enclosing the same, and also two return envelopes for each letter. We know of two hundred or more who have written recently. The Base censor of the American Expeditionary Forces has agreed to accept all Chinese mail which we will censor and forward it through the U. 8. Religious, social and educational work is delayed for lack of facilities, but some work along these lines is being done. Sick Chinese are visited regularly in the French hospital. Religious talks are made in the barracks on Sundays and at right. Some Christian literature in Chinese has been distributed. Religious services for the Christians are held regularly every Sunday morning and evening. A Bible Class for Christians, meeting twice a week, has been organised with an attendance of twenty-five. Educated Chinese in this class are being prepared to lead other classes of Chinese who wish to study the Bible.

No Chance At All

"Elleven of our crew were lost in the explosion. They never had a chance for their lives at all. There were a number of civilians on board and they stood by with the rest of the crew to go off in the small boats. "While we were getting into the sousts the U-boat suddenly bobbed up out of the water very close to us. Up went the hatch of the conning tower and out came the bearded face of the U-boat commander. As the long, alimy deck of the submarine cleared the waves other hatches were thrown open and the crew appeared on deck. There were two officers and a crew of fifteen men aboard the German rat. It was about 300 feet long, I should judge, and carried a complete wireless outfit and two 3-inch guns, one fore, the other aft.

"A fine bunch of pirates they were! The two German officers, big automatics in their hands, ordered us all aboard the U-boat. Our boats were bobbing around in the sea stirred up by the sinking of the Arcadia, and when our boys didn't pull up alongside the U-boat fast enough to suit the German commander he shot at aseveral of them while bellowing in rage. up by a British destroyer. The remainder perished."

The Third Degree

For sixty-four hours we were prisoners aboard the U-boat. There are some things they did to us that you cannot print. The first thing they did, of course, was to give us the third degree. They piled us with a hundred questions, asking us how many men the United States had sent to France, how many were in camps, where our fleet was located, how many destroyers we had, and all kinds of questions. But we absolutely refused to give up in any way.

Five Found In Possession Of Weapons Charged In Mixed Court

Five priests with shaven polls and in their long grey gowns stood in the dock at the Mixed Court yesterday .411 and were charged with possession of 95 38 57 .400 firearms and ammunition supposedly used in some of the numerous armed robberies that have occurred in Shanghai during the past six months. The men were arrested at 166 .547 Pakhoi Road by Detective Inspector Cruickshank and a revolver and six rounds of ammunition was found in 95 43 52 .453 a box on the premises. A further .447 search of the place resulted in the discovery of four air guns which the police believe may have been used in some of the robberies in which it has been reported that imitation weapons were used to cow the victims. Two women were arrested with the men, one of whom testifed that the revolver found had been given over to one of the accused by his sweetheart for safekeeping. The case was remanded for further inquiries.

Mr. Uyehara Etsujiro, a membe t the House of Representatives ntributes a lengthy article to the test issue of the Nihon-oyobi Nihonjin (Japan and the Japanese popular fortnightly magazine, on Peace Negotiations and Japan's Policy." In the latter half of his rticle Mr. Uyehara says:

"It is superfluous to say Japan's destiny is closely bound up with the future of Asia, particularly China, and it is probably in the in terest of both Japan and China that Tsingtao should remain in Japanes hands rather than in Germany's Moreover, when it is remembered that Japan has made huge sacrifice for the pacification of the Eastern turmoil arising from the hostilities system of rule which has fastened the in Europe, Japan may be justified ercless gyves of militarism on the in retaining possession of the ter-

But it is possible that Japan's insistence on this point will lead to some misunderstanding on the part of China and other Powers, who are under the impression that Japan intends to return the territory immediately after the termination of the war. It is of course quite another thing if the belligerent Powers, and particularly China, consent to the arrangement of Germany's lease of Tsingtao being transferred to Japan, but Japan's over-anxiety to retain possession of the territory in the face of strong opposition at the Peace Conference will expose her to the charge that she has ambitious designs of territorial aggrandisement.

when the Kalser's theory of Prussian invincibility is falsified.

The question naturally arises: Is the lie being given to the theory of German military invincibility? The answer is to be found in the body of the messages that have been received for the last few weeks describing the progress of the battles in the West. The smashing successes schieved by the Allied troops on the morrow of the great German offensives form the preliminary stage in the process of shaltering the belief in German intvincibility. The German official communiques are, of course, doing their best to cover up the far-reaching Japan's Natural Expansion "Furthermore, it is to be expect

"As regards the question of dis-posing of the South Sea Islands now under Japanese occupation, this matter is simpler than the Tsingtao matter is simpler than the Tsingtao problem in some respects, but more complex in other respects. Britain, too, holds some of the South Sea Islands, and in her eyes the question of disposing of these territories must assume very important proportions, as they are situated near Australia. It is therefore highly improbable that Britain will ever consent to these islands being returned to Germany. From this point of view, it appears to be a wise policy for Japan not to take the lead in demanding possession of the South Sea Islands. Even though the adoption of such a negative attitude by Japan results in the inlands being lost to her for ever, their loss will have no serious effect on the future interests of this country. There is a still more important matter claiming closer attention at the Peace Conference for strengthening Japan's position in Asia and in the Pacific, and it is only proper that Japan's policy should be shaped in accordance therewith.

Japan's Natural Expansion

"Needless to say, Japan's territory is limited, while her population is very large, with an increase of 500,000 or 660,000 yearly into the bargain. For the future interests of this country, therefore, it is most important that a sound policy facilitating the disposal of our surplus population in the various countries bordering the Pacific should be established. Territorial gains may be welcome for the purpose, but as the territorial aggrandisement can be accomplished only by militarism, which is not compatible with the general trend of world tendencies, Japan must avoid following any such aggressive policy if she intends to ensure her healthy development in the future. As an alternative, it becomes imperative for Japan to obtain freedom of residence for her people in all and any territory in and on the Pacific. If this object can be attained, the full development of the Japanese abroad is assured. By obtaining freedom of residence for the Japanese in Pacific territories is meant the recognition of the 'Open Door' principle regarding immigration in Australia, Canada, America, and India. In my opinion, it will be most advantageous to Japan to try to carry this policy at the Peace Conference.

"In Britain the League of Nations theory is finding strong support, and in America loud protests are raised

"In Britain the League of Nations theory is finding strong support, and in America loud protests are raised against German militaristic and agreessive principles. Public declarations are being constantly made that America entered the war to safeguard the independence and rights of small nations. A League of Nations cannot be realised when Britain, which possesses so large a portion of the earth, adopts an exclusive policy within her own territory. If the British advocates of a League of Nations should claim that all the Nations should claim that all the natural resources in British possessions should be permanently mono slons should be permanently mon-polised by their own nationals, not only would realisation of their idea of a League of Nations be impos-sible, but it would be inevitable that the non-British nations would pur-sue a militaristic aggressive policy the non-British nations would pur-sue a militaristic aggressive policy against her. So long as the British preach the League of Nations theory they ought to be ready to recognise the radical principle of placing the entire globe at the service of human-ity for its advance and development.

Again, the policy of confining a large number of people within their own territory of limited dimensions does not tend to assist the civilisation of the world, nor is such a policy calculated to bring about the peace of the world. At the Peace Conference after the war America will in all likelihood try to establish the principles for which she declares she entered the war. she declares she entered the war. As for Britain, she will advocate such principles as contribute to the establishment of permanent peace, if she does not actually put forward the League of Nations proposal. It is clear in these circumstances that Japan's advocacy of the 'Open Door' principle in Australia, Canada, America, and India will meet with no dissent from Britain and America, even though it may be recognised that the immediate enforcement of this principle is attended with many difficulties. principles as contribute to the es

The Leadership Of Asia

"White claiming the 'Open Door' in the territories of the Pacific, Japan ought to insist that America grant independence to the Philippines. America's suspicions of Japan have been the obstacle to her granting independence to the Philippines, and therefore Japan's expression of readiness to guarantee the independence of the Philippines, acting in concert with Britain and America, may induce the latter to comply with Japan's proposal. Even if she finds it difficult to signify immediate compliance, America will be unable to take exception to Japan's suggestion in principle. Japan must also insist that Hawaii be made a neutral zone. munication in the field is carried on simply by waving a flag. Nor, as others think, is if merely a matter of falking down a telephone. On the contrary, signaling in this war has become a very elaborate matter indeed. A signaler must have as many strings as possible to his bow, if he is to maintain communication under all sorts of conditions; and since this war is many kinds of war, some new, some did, so it follows that many means of communication are employed, some new, some old. It may be of interest to mention one or two of the newer methods.

They wouldn't of course. But there are such things as portable trench wireless sets, which can be carried about and run up in ten minutes. Their aerials are not 400 ft. high.

The Power buzzer is difficult to describe without being technical. It has the disadvantages of the telephone buzzer in that it can be picked up by the enemy, but if has the advantage of being, in a sense, wireless. A good deal of wire is used, but not (as in the case of the telephone) from one instrument to another across the heavily-shelled ground in between. If I say any more I shall find myzelf using difficult words again, so perhaps I had better leave it. Let us get on to something more human.

Obviously, if the country in rear of an advanced position is so heavily shelled that only a pigeon can get through, it follows that there is no means of replacing the pigeon once it has flown. A battalion signaling section going into action will probably carry several pigeons. However bad things are, the battalion can get a certain number of messages back, and that is sometimes a comforting thought.

Lessons Of The British Budget

A year ago the British Chancellor only about 185,000,000 a year, and of the Exchequer had the task of raising a larger sum by taxation than was ever before raised in the whole clear that if Britain continues to raise raise of the current cost of the war was to be read out 1300,000,000 a year it will meet about 1300,000,000 of its current the war was to be read out 1300,000,000 of its current.

a large sum for war expenditure. It is therefore in a remarkably good condition as contrasted with Germany. The war costs it more than seven millions a day; it costs Germany only five millions a day. Britain raises no contribution and can enforce no unpaid service from conquered peoples; Germany exploits forty million people and their property, besides its own vast and poorly paid population. Yet the British National Debt, which began at 1730, 900,000, is now only £3,900,000,000; while the German National Debt, which the German National Debt, which was only £245,000,000 at the beginning of the war, is now said to be about £5,000,000,000. Moreover Britain pays far more than the interest on its loans (which is less than £200,000,000 a year) out of taxes, while Germany pays a very large part of the interest itself every year out of borrowed money.

The contrast is still more remarkable if we glance at the future. To meet its current obligations (interest, bensions, and national service), apart from tut this surpassingly beautiful neet its current obligations (interest, censions, and national service), apart pensions, and national service), apart from war-cost, in the present year Germany would have to raise a sum of more than £700.000.000, and even the more optimistic Germans do not dream of a Budget of more than £450.000,000. Britain, on the other hand, need only raise for the same purpose (interest, pensions, and normal national service) about £400.-000.000 a year.

Before the war its expenditure was about £180,000.000 a year, of which £70,000.000 was taken for the Army and Navy, £17,000.000 for the service of the National Debt, and £7,000.000 repayment of Loan. The normal national service, in other words, cost clear that if Britain continues raise £700,000,000 a year it will me about £300,000,000 of its curre war-cost; Germany will, on the co pass ever belofe faised in the whole pistory of civilisation. If any considerable part of the current cost of the war was to be met out of taxation he must raise more than 1600,000,000 in a year. Germany, we know, has not for two years paid any of the cost of her war out of taxation. Even the interest on her debt is now largely paid out of borrowed money. But Britain, though she had a heavier expenditure and a far smaller population, chose the saner and more heroic course. A Budget was framed which was to yield 1638,000,000. The financial year closed on March 31, and it is announced that the yield for the year was f707,000,000.

No thoughtful person can read these terrible figures of expenditure without concern, and British business men are painfully alive to the magnitude of the burden which is being laid upon the shoulders of the nation. Yet we must acknowledge that this achievement is a wonderful testimony to the spirit and staying power of the British people. Since August, 1914, they have raised no less than f1,789,000,000 in taxation. Now taxation means real money. Loans have the peculiar virtue, which puzzles the layman, especially in the case of Germany, that they permit the same money to figure several times in successive periods. The annual Budget does not. Britain has raised f707,000,000 of real money in one year; and this was enough to more year; and this was enough

The importance of the partially deaf person to hear better in a noisy place is illustrated by the immediate dropping of the speaker's voice when the distracting noises cause as, for instance, when a carhearing what your friend was aging perfectly well while the train was in motion, but the instant it stops he drops his voice and you have to strain to hear him at all, this being particularly noticeable in a railroad or a subway train.

The speaker ruises his voice because his own ears are filled with conflicting noises, many of which (and this is an important point to motice) are not audible to the hard-of-hearing listener. But the latter, when he replies, generally fails to speak loud enough, for the very reason just mentioned, viz, that he is not as fully aware as is the other speak loud enough, for the very reazon just mentioned, viz., that he is not as fully aware as is the other of the existence of interfering sounds. You will find that people who are extremely deaf often become almost i inaudible in their speech because they i hear virtually no noise around them, and so utter their words with the slight force that is employed by persons of perfect hearing only when speaking in a very quiet, place. It is twenty important for those whose hearing is beginning to fall to note carefully the measure of force required to make their voices clearly audible in varying circumstances. By taking it his precaution public speakers who are partially deaf may speak as loudly and distinctly and in as good tones as if their hearing were perfect. As to "B's" contention, based on his acquaintance with physics, that the sounds of the voice are "magnified or increased in places where the altis in commotion." I fear that his knowledge of physics is a trifle confused. Interfering sound waves may either reinforce or neutralise one another, according to the phase in which their encounters take place, but it cannot be said that in general such interferince magnifies or increases.

The chance of a voice receiving a constant reinforcement from other sound waves vibrating in a continued medley of noises is infinitely small.

There may, however, be a selection made by the hearing organ itself when

made by the hearing organ itself when that organ is in an abnormal condition, the result of which will be to render certain sounds in a medley of noises more conspicuous than others. noises more conspicuous than others. It is common for persons of imperfect hearing to distinguish some notes much more clearly than others. Not infrequently one who is partially deaf finds that certain keys of a plano make no sound whatever for him, although he may be able to hear the adjoining notes easily. This shows, I suppose, the existence of some partial lesion in the delicate mechanism of the inner ear; the missing sound enters the ear like all the others, but it is able to make no

There is a practical advantage which the partially deaf man possesses that is of so surprising a character that it is often regarded with incredulity. I mean his ability to make way through a hubbub of noises, as in crowded street, with greater personal safety than is enjoyed by the ordinary person, who hears everything. Mr. H. G. Parlett, British Consul at Dairen, left on August 1 for his new post in Toklo, he was asked several times by his foreign friends to be their guest at a farewell dinner, but their guest at a farewell dinner, but while appreciating the honor. Mr. Parlett asked to be excused and expressed his wish that the cost of such functions be contributed to a war charity instead. Acting on this suggestion, a sum of Y.176 was collected and handed to Mr. Parlett, who forwarded the same to London to the Prisoners of War Fund.

The Japan Chronicle of August 15 writes as follows:

There is an extraordinary sentence in a Reuter-Kokusai message printed in yesterday's issue with regard to the recognition by France and Italy of the Czech-Slovak Government, Referring to the Council which has been established the message says: "The Council has received a copy of the treaty whereby the Council is given full jurisdiction over United States nationals living in Italian territory." Of course this is pure and unadulterated nonsense. The United States has not recognised the so-dailed Government, and if it had would not give jurisdiction over nationals residing in Italy to a Government which at present is a mere name, Besidea, Italy might well ask what she has done that jurisdiction over United States has given the new Government Jurisdiction over Czech-Slovaks who proceeded from America to Italy. Even so it is difficult to understand why such a step should be taken. If the Czech-Slovaks have taken out American papers they are American citizens, and their nationality cannot be withdrawn by a stroke of the pen, while even United States citizens are subject to the jurisdiction of the country which they enter unless extra-territoriality prevails. The telegram is a puzzle altogether. We can only suppose there has been an extensive mutilation. only suppose there has been an ex-ensive mutilation.

Public Morality In Japan

the Tokio journal's conception of tion ought to receive earnest atten to the Tokio journal's conception of public morality, the virtue consists in abstaining from all acts which give hurt or offense to others. If one of the many excellent precepts of Confucius is acted up to—namely, and suggests that practice of the that one should not do to others what virtue should begin in the home, one would not wish done to oneself—the in the trains, tram-cars, parks, is acted up to, the chief object of public morality can be attained.

Public morality is a virtue espital to human existence, proceeds be put up at these places, setting

The degree of public morality possessed by nations may well be taken as a standard in judging the level of their civilisation. The conspicuous lack of public morality among the Japanese is attributed by some people to national characteristics and educational defects, or to the adoption of the harmful family system, but in our Tokio contemporary's view it is to be ascribed rather to evils arising from the feudal system which was long prevalent. Whatever may be the real cause, the necessity of cultivating this virtue among the Japanese is strongly urged by the Hochi, now that intercourse with foreigners as well as fellow-nationals has become so close. The Tokio journal points out that extreme anti-Japanese views are often entertained by foreigners resident in Japan, and this curious fact is ascribed by the paper to the offensive manner in which Japanese behave themselves everywhere, and thus confirm the anticipations of these foreigners formed before their visit to these shores. When it is remembered, the Hochi proceeds, that lack of public morality is thus calculated to affect international relations, the utmost care must be taken by the Japanese to check this regrettable failing. That sosei-ranzo, of which there has been so much

It is a matter of impossibility, says the Hochi in conclusion, for Japan to claim a place among the first-class civilised Powers while the public morality of her people is left on its present low level.

All Over The Far East

The officer in command of the British troops at Vladivostock is not Colonel Warde (M.P. for Mid-Kent), but Colbnel Ward, M.P. for Stoke-on-Trent, a well-known Labor member, and Commander of the Labor Battalion. Col, Ward was on board the Tyndareus when she struck a mine off Cape Town and to his efforts the splendid discipline shown by the troops at a time of great peril was largely due.

Paris, August 22.—Referring to the German communique published

The official communique gives th real meaning of this new offensive capture of Morsam and Nouvron-Vingre and also the plateau of Nouvron, which commands the valley of the Aisne, helps to free Solsson while the occupation of the ledge of the ravine of Audignicourt and the plateau west of Nampcel gives the French a valuable view and also ex cellent fortified points.

On the other hand the fighting has een very intense on the front Roye Lassigny. Despite the stubborn resistance made by the enemy the Allied troops are progressing continually, particularly on the outskirts of Lassigny, the suburbs of which the French have reached on the west.

The German official communique will doubtless try to diminish the results obtained in our various operations on Sunday and Monday over ing those two days, the French aloncaptured in the one sector between the Oise and the Aisne more than 10,000 prisoners.

Lesson To Ladend

Paris, August 21.—The succes achieved yesterday by General Mangin's Army over a front of twentyfive kilometers form part of the battle engaged since August 8, which is to the village of Osly, the further most point the French reached on the Aisne, to the west of Soisson the distance is more than 100 kilo meters. The junction is made be tween the battlefield in Picardy and the battlefield in Tardenois.

Never were the Germans able to engage in a fight without intermis sion over such a stretch of ground. Before July 15 they could never do more than break through on a front of, at the maximum, seventy kilometers, in the manner of a bull fight. On July 15 they tried in Champagne and Tardenois a strate gical maneuver which failed piteous

No. 515

China Sea.

Shanghai District. Yangtze River - Langshan Crossing Shoal Water reported.

NOTICE is hereby given that reports have been received that the upper end of the Langshan Crossing, Yangtze River, has shoaled. It is estimated from these reports that there is now about 3 feet less water in this vicinity than shown on Marine Department Chart No. 3, (New Edition, 5th May, 1918).

Immediate steps are being taken to have the Langshan Crossing re-sounded and until this work has been completed vessels should navi-gate the vicinity with caution.

The Relieving Lightvessel "Tienching" is being used by the surveying party as a depot vessel and navigators are cautioned against mistaking her for an Aid to 'Navigation. The Lightvessel "Tienching' has a red hull and one trestle mast carrying a black drum.
